

Currently, team managers or administrators need to go to a team's specific sub teams page to view the relevant objects and user information, denying them a high level view of the information from the parent team itself.

How might we surface relevant information at a high level for admins and team managers?

How might we better communicate the various team hierarchies involved within advanced permissions?

How might we organize this information to avoid confusion?

